

First Annual Report of the Minimum Wage Commission of Massachusetts: For the Six Months Ending December 31, 1913 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from First Annual Report of the Minimum Wage Commission of Massachusetts: For the Six Months Ending December 31, 1913 To the Honorable the Senate and the House of Representatives in General Court assembled. The Massachusetts Minimum Wage Commission herewith respectfully submits the following report, covering the period from July 1, 1913, when the commission took up its duties, to Jan. 1, 1914. To it is appended the report of the secretary, summarizing the work carried on during that period, and containing an analysis of the results obtained, together with other information regarding the work of the commission. Survey of Minimum Wage Legislation. Minimum Wage in Other Countries. Systems of minimum wage legislation have been in operation in New Zealand since 1894, in Victoria, Australia, since 1896, followed by the inauguration of somewhat similar systems in the other Australian States and in the Australian Commonwealth, and in Great Britain since January 1910. Australasian legislation has in general followed one of two types. According to the Victorian system, minimum wages are established in specific occupations or industries through conferences known as wages boards, which consist of equal numbers of employers and employees, presided over by an impartial chairman. The determinations of the boards are reported in the government Gazette, and the wages fixed by the board become at once legally binding.
