

Secretariats Meadow

On March 30, 1970, Secretariat drew his first breath in a little white foaling shed on a historic farm called The Meadow in Caroline County, Virginia. Three years later he would leave the nation breathless as he captured the Triple Crown, shattering records and rivals alike. At The Meadow, Americas Super Horse learned to gallop across its rolling fields and its loamy track. There, Secretariat first felt the calming hand of a groom, the taste of a bit in his mouth and the weight of a rider on his back. At The Meadow, the foundation was laid for a legend. Though much has been written about his spectacular racing career, the complete story of Secretariats birthplace and the Chenery family who raised and raced him has never been told until now. And a Chenery granddaughter is telling it. Secretariats Meadow The Land, The Family, The Legend reveals an intimate picture of this storied place from the viewpoint of Kate Chenery Tweedy, daughter of Penny Chenery (Tweedy) and granddaughter of Meadow Stables founder Christopher T. Chenery. Co-authored with LEEANNE Meadows Ladin, the book tells not only Secretariats story, but the story of an enduring piece of land where an empire built on broodmares eventually produced an immortal son.
